Take a Stand

Vivienne Harr wants to make the world a better place for all kids. She sells lemonade to help children around the world.

- 1 When Vivienne Harr was 8 years old, she saw a photo she says she will never forget. It was an image of two young boys carrying large, heavy rocks on their backs. These children were the same age as Vivienne. But they did not have the same freedom and opportunities.
- 2 In some parts of the world, children are forced to work long hard days. They earn little or no pay. Many are treated as slaves. They do not go to school. Vivienne wanted to change this. "I want all kids to be able to play," Vivienne, now 10, told TFK. "I want them to be happy."
- 3 A Sweet Solution To help raise money for children like the two boys in the photo, Vivienne started a lemonade stand near her home in Marin County, California. She promised to work every day for a year, rain or shine. "Sometimes, it was hard for me, when the weather was bad or I wasn't feeling well," Vivienne says. "But I knew that other kids were having a harder time than I was at that very moment."
- 4 Vivienne aimed to earn $100,000 in 365 days. On day 175, she passed her goal. But that didn't stop Vivienne from working. With her family, she started Make a Stand, Inc. The company now bottles Vivienne's lemonade and sells it in 130 stores around the country. A small percentage of sales goes to support Vivienne's dream of making the world a better place for all children.

1. What inspired Vivienne to help children around the world?

- A. a photo of large, heavy rocks she saw when she was 8 years old
- B. opportunities young children had
- C. unfair behavior towards young children

2. “To raise money” (paragraph 3) means:

- A. to borrow money
- B. to collect money
- C. to earn money

3. What promise did Vivienne make?

- A. That she will start a lemonade stand near her home.
- B. That she will hardly work when the weather is bad.
- C. That she will sell lemonade whatever the weather.

5. Vivienne set a goal when she started selling lemonade. What happened with it?

- A. She did not reach her goal.
- B. She reached her goal sooner than planned.
- C. She reached her goal in 365 days.

6. What is the meaning of the word “to start” (paragraph 4)?

- A. to be on top of a company
- B. to join a company
- C. to establish a company

7. Make a Stand. Inc is a powerful name for a company. Why was this name chosen?

Because it sends a message that

- A. everyone should sell lemonade.
- B. everyone should make an effort to stop injustice.
- C. a better place for all children is our dream.

8. Write three adjectives that describe Vivienne.

1.2 Read the interview

Life at Age 11

A new documentary, I Am Eleven, features interviews with 11-year-old kids around the world

Australian filmmaker Genevieve Bailey wanted to see the world through the eyes of 11-year-olds. So over the course of six years, she traveled to 15 countries where she talked to kids about their lives. The result is a new documentary, I Am Eleven, which features 11-year-olds from around the world sharing their thoughts on family, school, friendship, war and their hopes for the future. The film is already in theaters in New York City and Los Angeles TFK (Time for Kids magazine) spoke to Ms Bailey to find out more about the filming process.

TFK:

What do you remember about being 11 years old?

GENEVIEVE BAILEY:

I actually felt really on top of the world when I was 11. For me, 11 was that point where you don't feel like a little kid anymore but you don't feel like a teenager. I'm glad I chose that age.

TFK:

Can you talk about the process of how you found the 11 year olds to interview?

GENEVIEVE BAILEY:

I hit the streets and asked people if they knew anyone who was 11. It was a really interesting way to see each city as well.

TFK:

How were the kids to interview? Were they shy, or eager to talk to you?

GENEVIEVE BAILEY:

I had three rules: the child had to be 11, they had to want to be part of the project, and their family had to give permission. The kids in the film, even though some of them were more shy than others, accepted to be part of the film. I'm really happy that, now that the film is finished, quite a few of the kids have seen the film and they are very proud of it.
