ENGLESKI JEZIK

UPUTSTVO

VRIJEME RJEŠAVANJA TESTA 180 MINUTA

Pažljivo pročitajte uputstvo.

Ne okrećite stranice dok to ne dozvoli dežurni nastavnik.

Za vrijeme rada na testu nije dozvoljena upotreba rječnika i elektronskih uređaja. Odgovore treba pisati hemijskom olovkom. Odgovori napisani grafitnom olovkom neće biti priznati.

Provjera razumijevanja slušanog teksta sastoji se od dva zadatka. Svaki tekst slušaćete dvaput. Imaćete dovoljno vremena da pročitate pitanja prije nego što čujete tekst kao i da provjerite svoje odgovore. Za vrijeme slušanja možete da zapisujete odgovore.

Odgovore na pitanja višestrukog izbora treba pažljivo prepisati na List za odgovore. Odgovori na ova pitanja koji nijesu napisani na Listu za odgovore neće se priznati.

Kod pisanja sastava dozvoljeno je pisanje koncepta na listovima za koncept. Vodite računa o broju riječi, jezičkoj pravilnosti i čitljivosti teksta. Konačna verzija čitko se prepisuje na predviđeno mjesto u testu i ona će biti ocijenjena.

GRANDPA PORTMAN

My grandfather, Abraham Portman, has been very important in my life. Growing up, Grandpa Portman was the most fascinating person I knew. He had lived in an orphanage, fought in wars, crossed oceans by steamship and deserts on horseback, performed in circuses, knew everything about guns and self-defense and surviving in the wilderness, and spoke at least three languages that weren't English. It all seemed very exotic to a kid who'd never left Florida, and I begged him to tell me his stories whenever I saw him. He always agreed, telling them like secrets that could be entrusted only to me.

When I was six I decided that my only chance of having a life half as exciting as Grandpa Portman's was to become an explorer. He encouraged me by spending afternoons at my side leaning over maps of the world, planning imaginary expeditions and telling me about the fantastic places I would discover one day. At home I made my ambitions known by parading around with a cardboard tube held to my eye, shouting, "Land ho!" and "Prepare a landing party!" until my parents told me to go outside. I think they worried that my grandfather would infect me with some incurable fantasies from which I'd never recover, so one day my mother sat me down and explained that I couldn't become an explorer because everything in the world had already been discovered. I'd been born in the wrong century, and I felt cheated.

I felt even more cheated when I realized that most of Grandpa Portman's best stories couldn't possibly be true. The best tales were always about his childhood, like how he was born in Poland but at twelve had been shipped off to a children's home in Wales. When I would ask why he had to leave his parents, his answer was always the same: because the monsters were after him. Poland was simply full of them, he said.

"What kind of monsters?" I'd ask, wide-eyed. It became a sort of routine. "Awful hunchedover ones with rotting skin and black eyes," he'd say. "And they walked like this!" And he'd march after me like an old-time movie monster until I ran away laughing.

CAN MONEY BUY YOU HAPPINESS?

- 1. According to a growing body of evidence, it seems that it can. But what makes us really happy is not buying ourselves the latest iPhone, but splashing our cash on other people.
- 2. In a study published last week looking at the link between generosity and happiness, researchers from Zurich University divided 50 participants into two groups and asked them to publicly pledge how they would spend a monthly endowment. One group was asked to spend 25 Swiss francs a week on gifts or outings for other people, and the second group was asked to spend it on themselves. Levels of happiness were measured on a subjective scale before and after the pledges. Those in the first group who pledged generously boosted their happiness more than the group who planned to buy themselves treats.
- 3. Participants then underwent an MRI scan to see which bits of the brain were most active during generous acts. During the scan, participants were asked to work out how they would like to spend money on a person of their choice. There is a part of the brain that neuroscientists say is associated with generosity, as well as one linked with happiness. When people made generous decisions in this study, both areas of the brain showed increased activity.
- 4. It is human nature, the evidence shows, to be generous, although, when asked in surveys, we assume that self-interest is a stronger emotion. But, it turns out, such self-interest doesn't make us nearly as happy as giving to others. Studies in which people have been given envelopes of money to spend show that those who spent a proportion of it on a gift, or gave some to charity, felt happier than those who spent it on a present for themselves or a bill they needed to pay. A study of young children found that even toddlers felt happier giving rather than getting treats. Other studies show that volunteering increases happiness.
- 5. Research looking at survey data from 136 countries found that spending on others has a "consistent, causal impact on happiness". This was true across a range of cultures and economies. The best news is that you don't have to give much to feel the benefits. And it is morally fine to give only because it makes you happier.

- 1. The evidence that money can buy happiness is
 - A. increasing.
 - B. declining.
 - C. dropping.
 - D. fluctuating.
- 2. What was the result of the Zurich University experiment?
 - A. Generosity and happiness are related.
 - B. Generosity does not influence happiness.
 - C. Generosity is the result of happiness.
 - D. Generosity reduces our happiness.
- 3. What were the people doing while their brains were MRI scanned?
 - A. buying gifts for other people
 - B. buying things for themselves
 - C. paying for gifts for other people
 - D. planning what to do with the money
- 4. Which of the following increases happiness?
 - A. being at a younger age
 - B. being self-centred
 - C. volunteering
 - D. working in one of 136 countries
- 5. How did the researchers collect the data from 136 countries?
 - A. checking people's bills
 - B. conducting a poll
 - C. monitoring people's shopping
 - D. scanning peoples brains

THE MARK OF A MASTERPIECE

- 1. Every few weeks, photographs of old paintings arrive at Martin Kemp's eighteenthcentury house, outside Oxford, England. Many of the art works are so decayed that their once luminous colors have become washed out. Kemp scrutinizes each image with a magnifying glass, attempting to determine whether the owners have discovered what they claim to have found: a lost masterpiece by Leonardo da Vinci.
- 2. Kemp, a leading scholar of Leonardo, also authenticates works of art a rare, mysterious, and often bitterly contested skill. His opinions carry the weight of history. His judgment can also transform a previously worthless object into something worth tens of millions of dollars. To maintain independence, Kemp refuses to accept payment for his services. "As soon as you get entangled with any financial interest or advantage, there is a taint, like a tobacco company paying an expert to say cigarettes are not dangerous," he says.
- 3. Kemp, who is in his sixties, is an emeritus professor of art history at Oxford University, and has spent more than four decades immersed in what he calls "the Leonardo business," publishing articles on nearly every aspect of the artist's life. Like many connoisseurs, Kemp has a formidable visual memory. When vetting a painting, he proceeds methodically, analyzing brushstrokes, composition, iconography, and pigments those elements which may reveal an artist's hidden identity. But he also relies on a more primal force. "The initial thing is just that immediate reaction, as when we're recognizing the face of a friend in a crowd," he explains. "You can go on later and say, 'I recognize her face because the eyebrows are like this, and that is the right color of her hair,' but, in effect, we don't do that. It's the totality of the thing. It feels instantaneous."
- 4. In March, 2008, Kemp checked his e-mail and saw another submission a digital image of a drawing on vellum, or fine parchment. Ever since Dan Brown published "The Da Vinci Code," five years earlier, Kemp had been flooded with works, and, after a lifetime of dismissing forgeries and copies and junk, he was instinctively wary. He made a habit of cataloguing the mistakes of Leonardo's imitators and forgers: an inadvertent right-handed brushstroke; a deadened effect from painting robotically; a failure to layer the paint so that light played subtly off it. The drawing of the girl betrayed none of these failings, and Kemp decided to examine the picture himself.

5. He meticulously interrogated the drawing for more than a year. The hair style and the costume of the girl, he concluded, were similar to those worn in the Milanese court of the fourteen-nineties. But, if this was the drawing's origin, who could the princess in the drawing be? Sifting through members of the court, Kemp settled on the most likely suspect: Bianca Sforza, the Duke of Milan's illegitimate daughter. Kemp named the portrait "La Bella Principessa" — "The Beautiful Princess" — and he could no longer suppress the sensation that had seized him when he first saw the portrait. In the fall of 2009, Kemp announced to colleagues and reporters that it was "the real thing": a Leonardo masterpiece. Since then, many critics have been trying to prove him wrong – but none has succeeded – yet. The years to come will prove whether he has made the biggest miss in his career or not.
